I think that receptivity is one of the most important qualities to possess for students living in today's globalized society.

Through globalization we have more opportunities to interact and communicate with people from various backgrounds. In order to foster and maintain good relationships in today's cultural diverse society, we must be receptive to other cultures, religions, customs, and in general be open to different ways of thinking, even when they differ from and challenge our own way of thinking, or even our core values.

For this reason, I think we should place a strong emphasis on promoting receptivity among our students through our English lessons
